

Changes to buy/sell spreads

CHANGES TO SELL SPREADS FOR THE PERPETUAL FIXED INCOME FUNDS

What is a buy/sell spread?

Estimated transaction costs are allocated when an investor buys or sells units in a fund by incorporating a buy/sell spread between a fund's entry and exit unit prices, where appropriate. This aims to ensure that other investors aren't impacted by the transaction costs associated with a particular investor buying or selling units in the fund. The spread is based on our estimates of the average transaction costs incurred by a fund and will impact the return on your investment.

Why are they changing?

As a consequence of the escalating tensions between Russia and Ukraine, we observed a sustained period of heightened volatility in credit markets and increased buy/sell spreads for a number of Fixed Income Funds on 4 March 2022. Since then, credit market conditions have been improving and we have observed a steady reduction in volatility. We have reviewed the appropriateness of current buy/sell spreads across our suite of funds and believe it is now appropriate to revert back to the standard spreads.

We will continue to regularly review market conditions and make adjustments only when necessary.

This temporary increase to the spreads ensured that investors in the funds were treated fairly and the increased transaction costs are incurred by those investors who are transacting and not passed on to all unit holders.

The new buy/sell spreads will take effect from 25 March 2022.

What are the new buy/sell spreads?

Does Perpetual profit from this change?

No, the buy/sell spread is not a fee paid to us, it is retained in the fund to cover the actual transaction costs as they are incurred.
